

The International Analytical Psychology Scholar Program at the C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco 2019-2021

The C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco is pleased to invite applications to become its International Scholar for the period September 1, 2019 to August 21, 2021. Applications must be received by January 31, 2019.

Program Description

The International Analytical Psychology Scholar Program is an advanced training opportunity offered by the C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco. The program, begun in 1996, offers a two-year course of intensive study in analytical psychology to a mental health professional from a country where formal Jungian analytic training is not available. Our most recent scholars have been from Taiwan, Hungary, Poland, India, Colombia and Romania. Past scholars have included a psychiatrist from Korea, an academic psychologist from China, and a psychology scholar from Bulgaria.

The International Analytical Psychology Scholar Program is both academic and clinical, and is intended to further personal development and enhance skills as a depth psychotherapist. It is important to note that the International Analytical Psychology Scholar Program is different from both our Analytic Training Program and our Internship Program for predoctoral psychology students working at our Outpatient Clinic. However, the International Scholar attends seminars with our first- and second-year analytic candidates, participates as an intern in our Clinic (both working under supervision with patients and taking didactic courses with the predoctoral interns). Additionally, he or she participates in a personal analysis and consultation with analyst members of the C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco.

The International Scholar will not be certified as an analyst as a result of participation in our program. However, she or he will experience a substantial grounding for the further study of analytical psychology. Most of our former International Scholars have subsequently become Jungian analysts via the International Association for Analytical Psychology (IAAP).

Qualifications

Applicants to the International Analytical Psychology Scholar Program must have sufficient academic preparation to be able to participate in coursework at the post-graduate level. The applicant must also be a practicing mental health professional who has completed a program of study in his or her country of residence that places the applicant within a reasonable range of the qualifications of our candidates in analytic training. The scholar must be a practitioner who has demonstrated personal and professional qualities that accord with the standards set forth in The C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco Analytic Training Program brochure.

The applicant must be sufficiently proficient in English to be able to participate in the program described above and may be asked to take an English proficiency exam, such as TOEFL, for the purposes of verification.

Expenses

There are no fees or tuition for seminars and didactic sessions for the International Scholar at the C. G. Jung Institute of San Francisco. Supervision, personal analysis and consultation are also offered at no cost to the International Scholar. The International Scholar must be prepared to accept financial responsibility for travel and living expenses that will be incurred while participating in the program, and will have to cover the cost of room and board, medical insurance, and commuting within the Bay Area. (Our Committee will offer guidance and orientation regarding these aspects of living in the Bay Area). We estimate the minimum living cost for a single individual to be about U.S. $17,000 – $19,000 for each year of training, and the cost of living in the Bay Area can be a good deal more. Depending on contributions from donors, a modest monthly stipend may be available to help offset some of these expenses.

How to Apply

Please visit our web page for complete information on the program and how to apply.

<http://www.sfjung.org/clinical-training-at-the-c-g-jung-institute/international-student-program/>

We are accepting applications for the new International Scholar for the years 2019-2021. All parts of the application should be in our hands by Thursday, January 31, 2019. You can contact Helene Dorian, Training Administrator at hdorian@sfjung.org if you have any questions about the application process. Send the application to Helene Dorian, Training Administrator at C.G. Jung Institute of San Francisco, 2040 Gough Street, San Francisco, CA 94109 or email: hdorian@sfjung.org